Overview

The United Nations Global Compact (UNGC) will host the Clean and Green Economy: Africa-China Private Sector Forum on Collective Action for Sustainable Growth at the annual Global South-South Development Expo to bring together African and Chinese companies in the clean energy and infrastructure industries to discuss the importance of good governance and proper management in growing green economies.

Given the strong economic ties between Sub-Saharan Africa and China, as well as the high consumption of energy and need for energy and infrastructure development in both regions, the Clean and Green Economy dialogue will offer a platform for companies in these two regions to come together for collaboration, education and creating partnerships to work towards sustainable growth and development for the rapidly growing South.

The Clean and Green Economy forum will be an interactive panel discussion in which African and Chinese businesses and organizations in the infrastructure development industries can discuss key challenges and opportunities in developing green infrastructure in Africa, , with particular attention to corruption along the supply chain in the construction and energy industries.

In the closing segment of the forum, the UN Global Compact Africa and China representatives, Olajobi Makinwa and Liu Meng, will showcase the new UN Global Compact Business Partnerships Action Hub and Global Compact projects and activities in the global South. The Action Hub serves as a platform for collective action where business can connect with other stakeholders—governments, companies and civil society organizations—to tackle issues of sustainable development, poverty eradication and corruption at the local, national, regional and international levels.
