Session:
Hot Seat: Imagine a World

Richard sits on four boards of directors / advisers. He started in business, working 15 years building B2B and B2C marketing infrastructure for technology enterprises. At Citibank he co-founded and patented a payments backbone, and later launched an artificial intelligence brand with the same partners. He was management consultant at Mercer building its early IBM JV platform. Before his Ross MBA, he launched two tech brands in pneumatics and data. Earlier in college, he was an Apple network administrator, writing his honors thesis on "Effects of email on work group communication." Business Insider named Richard as one of 21 careers to watch.

Richard has written, anchored, and produced content for broadcast, social, web and print platforms at the largest, most exclusive media corporations including CNN Worldwide, MSNBC, NBC News, USA Today, Politico, Seattle Times, Detroit Free Press, and others. Richard's domestic-global storytelling has earned him team Peabody and Emmy Awards.

Richard is a former campaign manager and currently a Policy Fellow at the University of California, Riverside. He's reported on every U.S. national election since 2004 and elections in Indonesia, Malaysia and Taiwan. He's interviewed hundreds ranging from U.S. Senators and Representative to U.S. President.

As United Nations Spokesperson, US State Dept. Traveling Speaker, and ambassador for several NGOs, Richard has spoken at hundreds of events in recent years including commencement speeches at UC Berkeley, University of Guam, City College of SF, and others. Topics include social media, leadership and gender equality. Venues include business programs at Duke, Harvard and Michigan; firms like Delta, Wells Fargo and Google; and locations on six continents.
